Hasal Says They Are Harnessing Industry in His Homeland

TELLS OF FLIGHT

Assesses the Strength and Weakness of Soviet War Machine

(General Antonin Hasal says the Russians have been "preparing for war" ever since the Second World War ended, and are harnessing industry in his Communist-ruled homeland of Czechoslovakia.)

The highest-ranking Czechoslovak officer and military aide to President Beneš until the latter's recent resignation has just escaped into the U. S. Occupation Zone of Germany. In this third of four articles he assesses the strength and weakness of the Soviet war machine.

The Russian soldier is a primitive man, wide open to outside impulses and reactions.

The Soviet regime fosters this incredible mixture of vitality and carelessness, kindness and cruelty, sound basic intelligence, and unspeakable misinformation.

I learned to know the Russian soldier when I fought against the Bolsheviks from 1917 to 1919 when the Czechoslovak Legion, fighting beside the Allies, broke through Siberia to Vladivostok.

All my other contacts with Russian officers and men in my official capacity since have confirmed this view.

For thirty years the Russian soldier has been taught under a dictatorship that the state is "all-powerful, always right, must not be criticized in any way, and that no sacrifice for those at the head is great enough."

A Soviet soldier must be a fanatic and above all he must never doubt that the Communist regime is the best and most progressive in the world. So says Moscow.

HERE AND THERE IN BUCKS COUNTY TOWNS

Activities of Interest To All in The Various Communities

GLEANED BY SCRIBES

That the Doylestown police department, now equipped with a new car carrying a regularly tested speedometer, should wage an immediate campaign against speeding automobiles, truck and passenger buses, is the unanimous opinion of Doylestownians, heard expressed on the streets of the community.

Doylestown borough councilmen agree that "there is no reason whatsoever why speeding should not be broken up immediately."

In one Montgomery county borough recently there were 19 arrests made for speeding in one day. The records show that not that many arrests have been made for speeding in Doylestown in a year or more.

The Main street "speedway" is a favorite spot for speedsters, but there are other sections of town where speeding and reckless driving is rampant.

On Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Lansing McCurley, Perkaskie, celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary. McCurley is sports editor of the Philadelphia Daily News and well-known in sporting circles throughout the East. Many friends made the trip from the city to extend congratulations to the silver wedding celebrants on Sunday. The couple have one child, a son, Lansing, Jr.

Officers Wamold and Ulmer, of the Perkaskie police department, were rewarded for a two-months vigil at Perkaskie's public play.

A SUMMARY OF THE NEWS

The House Committee on Un-American Activities stated yesterday that it had been confirmed that at least $2,000 had been paid by a high Soviet representative for services rendered by wartime espionage rings operating out of Washington.

Harry F. Alber, chief of the price and distribution division in Japan, was under suspension pending a loyalty check. He was preparing to return to Washington for a hearing.

Mikhail A. Samarin, Russian teacher sought by Soviet authorities, accepted a subpoena to testify before the House committee, but again returned to hiding. He said that he wished to renounce his Soviet citizenship. The Soviet consulate in New York stated that Mrs. Oksana S. Kosenkina, another teacher reported to be anti-Soviet, was not a prisoner but was working in the consulate's library. Police tried to interview her, without success.

Representative Fred A. Hartley, Jr., chairman of the House Labor Committee, announced in connection with testimony concerning Communist infiltration into New York department store labor unions that he would file libel suits against persons who had attacked him.

Cuts An Artery; Able to Summon Some Assistance

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 11—Wesley Pettit is in a serious condition in Doylestown Emergency Hospital, he having accidentally cut an artery in his foot.

According to Patrolman Verry Hoyt, of the Doylestown police, Pettit was at his room, Saturday night, where he dropped a broken bottle on the top of his right foot, cutting an artery.

Pettit, who is employed by a local hauler, pounded on the wall of his room for help and was heard by a neighbor who called the police.

Patrolman Hoyt found Pettit bleeding profusely and his room and cot covered with blood. He was rushed to the hospital in the police car, and a short time later lapsed into unconsciousness. Medical aid was administered and it was not until Monday morning that he regained consciousness for short intervals.

BIPARTISANISM

PART ONE

Constant references are being made to the foreign policy of the United States as being "bipartisan." Let's look into the facts.

The present foreign policy is not something that sprang, like Venus from the sea, into being full-grown and complete. It is, on the contrary, an outgrowth and development, by evolutionary processes throughout the history of the New Deal.

It traces back to what President Roosevelt did and did not do immediately after he came to office. His insistence on recognizing Russia, and his failure to demand that the U. S. back up the Wilsonian League of Nations by joining it in 1933, both are part of the present world crisis and our national attitude towards it.

No one will seriously assert that the Republican party had any influence on President Roosevelt's foreign policies prior to the outbreak of the Second World War with Germany's invasion of Poland on September 1, 1939.

Roosevelt had a tight grip on Congress, and he asked the opinions of no Republicans on what he ought to do. The concept of bipartisanship did not appear on the horizon until June 10, 1940, when President Roosevelt was preparing to make his bid for his Third Term election.

During that long period, from 1933 to 1940, this country's foreign policy, which was Democratic (or New Deal, if you prefer) and certainly not in any sense even pretending to be bipartisan, was one of isolationism or non-intervention.

Roosevelt let the League of Nations wreck itself trying to curb the expansions and aggressions of Italy (which withdrew from the League December 11, 1937), Russia (expelled on December 14, 1939), Germany and Japan, together with the use of Spain by Russia, Germany, Italy and England as a testing ground for new military devices and techniques.

Roosevelt did nothing to support the League of Nations in this period. On the contrary he made "quarantine" speeches, signed the Arms Embargo Act (September 9, 1939); proclaimed the Neutrality Act (November 4, 1939); recognized Franco (April 1, 1939); said "hands off" to the Munich pact (September 29, 1938); proclaimed neutrality in the European War (September 5, 1939).

Released on Bail

ONE OF THE 12 alleged Communists indicted on charges of plotting the overthrow of the U. S. Government by force, Gus Hall, alias Gus Hallberg, is shown after he was arraigned in New York's Federal Court. He pleaded not guilty to the charges. Before Hall was released in $5,000 bail, he had to spend four and a half hours in a federal detention cell because his bail bondsman showed up with a $10,000 bill. The court clerk would not accept it. So the bondsman had to rush to the bank and get two "fives" for his $10,000 bill. (International)

ENLARGING DOMESTIC SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

New and Elaborate Quarters Being Installed At Bristol High

TO HAVE 2 TEACHERS

It's a far cry from the old-fashioned kitchen where the iron stove burning wood, corn-cobs or coal, was used for everything from canning, baking, general cooking, heating, to drying wet boots and clothing, to the modern gas and electric units which are great time savers. And, a modern kitchen, together with other modern home appliances are what the girls attending Bristol high school, will find waiting for them this fall in the new and enlarged domestic science department.

Not only will the most modern equipment be found in the kitchen, the laundry and sewing section, but there will also be included in the course, general instruction and helpful hints in methods not so far advanced—just in case some of the young women do not have in their own homes all types of modern household appliances.

The plan is to aid the girls in proper methods of house work and general home-making, in order that they will know how to keep their homes spotless, do their work properly and as expeditiously as possible, regardless of what equipment is at hand. The girl who has the advantage of an electric washer or ironer at home will learn how to operate and care for those appliances; while the girl who will find it necessary to use a wash-board in a tub, and a small hand iron for all ironing purposes, will be given hints on best ways to use these appliances.

But all instruction will prove of benefit to the future home-makers of Bristol and vicinity.

Soviet Press Says Talks on Germany Deadlocked

Berlin. The Soviet press said today that Moscow talks on Germany have become deadlocked by Russian rejection of a proposal for four-power control of Russian currency in Berlin. The Western powers reportedly agreed to accept exclusive use of Red currency but demanded joint control over the money.

British sources said meanwhile that the Soviet transport chief is meeting with transport officials to review the transport situation, indicating that the Soviets might be preparing to lift the blockade on rail traffic.

Rebellion Over High Meat Prices Spreads

Chicago.—The "petticoat rebellion" against high meat prices which started in Texas spread to Memphis, Tenn., and Chicago today. At Memphis 20,000 civic club members organized a meat strike to include 34 civic groups. In Chicago, the Illinois Women for Wallace planned to demonstrate at the Chicago stockyards tomorrow and organize a chain of telephone calls urging meatless meals. The meatcutters union, meanwhile, foresaw that many of its butchers would be out of work soon if the campaign continues, although meat prices were largely unaffected.

Samarin to "Tell All" in Return for Protection

He was subpoenaed to appear before the House Un-American Activities Committee, over the angry objections of the Russians who demanded that the State Department hand Samarin over to Soviet officials.

FOUR DAYS DYING

The old battleship Nevada has followed the old U. S. S. New York to the bottom of the Pacific.
Somewhere the New York fooled
everybody in the task force assigned to give her the final coup de grace. The naval aviators who were all set to bomb her to the bottom never got a chance to let go a single bomb. A few surface ships made their runs on her and down she went after only four hours of gunfire.

With the Nevada the fleet didn't have it so easy. Anyone might have thought this survivor of two world wars and two atomic bombs at Bikini was ready and willing to take the plunge. What was?

No, she wasn't. For four days (not hours) the old Nevada took everything that 14 fighting ships could pour on her, from five-inch shells to the 16-inch main battery
salvos of the battleship Iowa.
When the ships lifted their fire
the carrier bombers took over the attack, and splattered the old hulk from stem to stern. Not until the torpedo bombers came in with their big "fish," striking below
the water-line, did the stubborn
old ship give up and sink.

It was one magnificent death.
It was enough to make her old crews, for the past 32 years, feel even prouder of her.

What knowledge has been gained from this tremendous expenditure of ammunition? Well, there was the practice in gunnery and bombing. More data was gathered on what naval weapons could and could not do. The exercise showed how well a battleship hull was built a generation ago—if that was of any interest.

The knowledge gained was one thing—but the moral was another.
The Nevada had to be sunk. Like the New York, she could not be left afloat anywhere in the world, because she was still radioactive from Bikini, two years ago. Being a ship, she could be sent to a safe place. That was the bottom of the sea.

The Weather Bureau is 60 years old, but hasn't yet been able to improve the wetness of the rain or the whiteness of the snow.

Bipartisanship

This was isolationism—as a Roosevelt policy, and not as bipartisanship. It was so accepted by the Roosevelt followers. If you doubt it, read such speeches as, for example, the campaign
address of former New Deal Governor Earle of Pennsylvania, close friend and supporter of Roosevelt, formerly in his diplomatic corps, who on September 16, 1938, opened the radio end of his campaign for U. S. Senate by identifying himself as a Roosevelt Democrat and stating: "I am for neutrality and isolation." Far from considering this a bipartisan stand, Governor Earle pictured Roosevelt as working for peace while intimating that Republicans were fomenting war because they were greedy for "blood-stained dollars."

The shift from this policy of isolation to "aid short of war"
which occurred in the Roosevelt Administration during late 1939 and 1940 was no more bipartisan than the prior policy.

It was a largely concealed shift, duplicitous so far as the public was concerned. It was engineered by a small coterie surrounding the President; and there is no evidence that either the Democrats or the Republicans were ever told what was really going on.
The President promised the country, as he later said,
"again and again and again," to keep out of the war.

But meanwhile he plunged into the non-shooting end of it by such steps as the repeal of the Arms Embargo (November 4, 1939); enactment of "cash and carry" aid to the Allies in early 1941; the presentation to Great Britain, on his own authority, of some fifty U. S. destroyers (Congress informed of this September 3, 1940); giving to the Allies vast quantities of superseded obsolete or surplus war materials; zoning the Atlantic and Pacific oceans; and, eventually, Lend-Lease (signed March 8, 1941).

The first fiction of bipartisanship appeared in our foreign policy in June of 1940, immediately before the political conventions, and at a time when the President had made up his mind to bid for a Third Term election.

Simultaneously with his demand (on June 10) for billions from Congress for a rearmament or defense program, the President announced two dramatic shifts in his cabinet. The Democratic Secretaries of War and Navy were replaced by Republican appointees.

Was this bipartisanship? It was not so considered at the time.
The two Republican appointees were promptly read out of their party. Moreover, they were both men who had warmly supported the Roosevelt foreign policies. At least one of the incumbents replaced by the President (Secretary of War Woodring) was a self-styled "non-interventionist" who opposed the Roosevelt attempt to get into the war through the back door.

Roosevelt ran for election in 1940 as a leader committed to neutrality as his foreign policy. A quite different policy was behind the numerous secret deals which were made by Roosevelt during 1940 and 1941; from the Aid-to-Britain promises he gave Churchill, to the little-publicized ABCD (America, Britain, China, Dutch) agreement in the Pacific arena which committed this country to almost inevitable war with Japan.

The "keep America out of the War" public policy was a sham for political purposes, and of course was not bipartisan.
The secret alliances were secret, and hence of course were not bipartisan.

There is no basis whatever in fact for anyone assuming that national foreign policy up to Pearl Harbor was in any sense of the word a bipartisan policy.

Inside Your Congress

—O—

The Dragon Killers

—by—

SAMUEL B. PETTINGILL
"The Gentleman from Indiana"

Let's look at these crusaders against high prices. One of the dragon killers is Senator Alben Barkley, now candidate for vice-president.

Barkley is a spokesman for tobacco. On June 17th he introduced an amendment to the farm bill to give tobacco growers a permanent price support of 90 per cent of parity.
On other crops the price floor
is less. On still others, it is nothing.
Barkley wanted special treatment for his tobacco. His amendment squeezed through by a vote of 41 to 40. Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, gave Barkley his needed
vote.

Wyoming does not grow tobacco.
It consumes it. It is a wool and meat state. Senator O'Mahoney is a crusader for lower prices for steel, but not for wool or meat.
At the last session of Congress, O'Mahoney got the support price for wool raised to 48 cents—equal to the highest level at which it had ever sold on the market.

So, Kentucky pays more for wool,
and Wyoming more for tobacco.
And all of us, everywhere, pay more for both. Cigarettes have just jumped their price again. But beware of the Steel Trust shout the two Senators. There are no huge steel mills in Wyoming and Kentucky.

This is log-rolling on what might be called internal tariff rates.
Other Senators and Congressmen do the same for the industries and crops of their states. The two Senators are honorable men, according to the rules of the game.

Intervention by government in economic affairs has become such a habit, that few Congressmen or Senators could be re-elected if they did not engage in it. Their people demand it. And, in a way, the people are helpless, too. It is too much to ask of human nature to expect people in one state to pay more for tobacco, as a result of logrolling, unless they can "even up" on wool or a "minimum wage."

Now there is a demand that a house be built in Washington, D. C., for the vice-president at a cost of $2,500,000. Who sponsors this?
Why, a Congressman from Kentucky, which furnishes the Democratic candidate for that office, and a Congressman from California, which furnishes the Republican candidate. Yet both congressmen and both candidates for vice-president will, undoubtedly, campaign for lower prices for houses!

President Truman demands that something be done at once about the high cost of housing, but spends $10,000 of our money for a new porch in the house he now occupies.

Such is the dilemma of our democracy, a dilemma shot through with inconsistency and hypocrisy. It leads to a crusade against steel and special treatment for tobacco, wool and meat. It causes businessmen to wire their Congressmen to reduce their taxes, but get us a new Federal airport. It divides us into pressure blocs, snarling at each other with all the hard feeling and sectional bitterness that is involved. As in France, the situation will get worse unless we form a League of Honest Men who are willing to spend time and money to educate all to put the interests of all above those of pressure blocs.

Such is the price we paid and will pay for abandoning State's rights and local self-government. As long as we preserved them, a town could vote not to tax itself for some extravagance it did not need. If it saved money for itself, it was not taxed to build an extravagance in some other town.

ST. ANN'S BOOSTS LEAD A FULL GAME; DEFEATS 5TH WARD

St. Ann's increased its lead to a full game in the Bristol Suburban League by taking over the Fifth Ward Sporting Club, 9-3, last evening on Memorial Park field. The "Saints" have two more games to play and need but one victory to assure themselves of a tie.

It didn't take the Wood streeters long to get started in last evening's fracas as they bunched "Bill" Stockton for three runs in the second on two doubles a single, and a long fly to left by Sallustio. They added another in the third on "Rabbit" Palumbo's base running.

Fifth Ward came within one run of deadlocking the score in the last half of the third but after "Sal" Pappaterra relieved "Johnny" McCarthy, the Warders were helpless. Pappaterra held the losers to three hits the remainder of the game and blanked them. "Pappy" whiffed six batters.

Stockton was taken from the mound in the fourth after the Saints registered a quartet of tallies. In this frame, Palumbo tagged one of Stockton's pitches for a triple. Tony Piazza took Stockton's place and did not give up a safe blow. He was touched for several hard blows but the Fifth Ward outfielders camped under them, especially the catch made by "Smithers" Cordisco in the seventh.

Both Palumbo and "Lou" Sassi had two hits for the winners while Gene Stockton had three hits for Fifth Ward. "Danny" Fico caught a nice game for the losers and also smacked out a long double and single.

Walter Dietz Honored By Ayrshire Association

For distinguished success as a breeder of Ayrshire dairy cattle, Walter Dietz, Spring Creek Farm, Yardley, has been presented the "Constructive Breeder Award" by the Ayrshire Breeders' Association. In order to qualify for this honor, which is considered the most coveted prize in dairy cattle circles, it is necessary for the breeder to excel in production and type, and in addition, a high percentage of the herd must have been bred and developed by the owner. The Spring Creek cattle were given a rigid physical inspection by official judge, James M. Cochran, Bath, N. Y., who scored the herd 877, placing it among the top 10% of the breed on type characteristics. Six members of the herd were designated as "Excellent," which is the highest rating given any Ayrshire; while no less than twelve others were classified as "Very Good," which is the second highest score.

On a strictly twice a day milking schedule the entire milking herd of 23 head averaged 8,788 pounds of 4% milk. No less than 96% of the herd was bred and owned by Dietz for at least four years.

This is the second award of this kind presented to Dietz.

DEMOCRAT CLUB MOVES CLOSER TO THIRD POSITION

Scoring a 12-8 victory last evening, the Democrat Club moved closer to third place in the Bristol Suburban League. The "Demies" win was over the Voltz-Texaco team and put them one game away from the Hibs who are resting in third.

The contest was sort of a scoring bee. Voltz had the lead in the first and again in the second. They tied the game in the fourth but when the Democrats crossed the plate four times in the fourth, it practically sewed up the game.

Bob Ghannt and "Toby" Oriola did the pitching for the winners with Oriola getting credit for the victory. The gas men scored their final trio of markers off Oriola in the sixth.

"Johnny" Pindar was the starting Voltz moundman, he being relieved by "Jimmy" Cooper in the fourth. Pindar was the losers. The pair of Voltz hurlers gave up eight passes and allowed but six hits.

"Sid" Pursell led the Democrat batsmen with three hits in four trips to the plate. Both Alex Dew-nap and Cooper had three hits each for the Oilers.

Only four boys are over 16 years of age. Arthur Stracelo is the commander of the corps and Robert Cotter, Jr., musical director, of Paulshorpe high school, is instructor. Cotter also is leader and musical director of the Riverside, N. J. American Legion Senior Corps. These famous "Jersey Joes" finished as runner-up in the national competition at New York, last September. They will again compete at the national event in Miami, Fla. in October. Cotter has incorporated much of the Riverside showmanship in the cadet corps, and their appearance at Philadelphia will bear watching. It is claimed.

On Saturday, Aug. 29th, the corps will again participate in the American Legion parade in Philadelphia, which will start at 2 p. m. Route of parade will be from the Parkway at 21st street, to Independence Hall, at 5th and Chestnut streets. The parade will move over Broad street, around city hall and down Chestnut street.

On Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, the cadets will conduct their annual tag day. Residents of Bristol can thus contribute towards their expenses at the convention. The committee for the corps is: Robert B. Downing, Irvine Hetherington, John McClafferty, William Spezzano, Robert Orino, John Harmon, Howard Boyd and Raymond Kepchinski.

ground, when they apprehended three youths who were riding a motor scooter around the playgrounds.

Officials observed early this season that the baseball fields, the tennis courts, as well as the sod covered areas, were damaged by vehicular traffic and police were directed to keep watch for the offenders. Throughout the summer, police made regular visits to the playground after operating hours, but not until this week did they find the offenders.

Wambold and Ulmer heard the chugging scooter and drove to the scene where they saw the scooter with three passengers, ranging in age from 14 to 16.

The officers lodged information against the trio, who have been summoned to appear before Justice Edward Keller.

SPORTSMEN SET DATE FOR SHOOT AND OUTING

Two important dates to local sportsmen were set last evening when members of the Bristol Fish & Game Protective Association met in the American Legion Post Home on Radcliffe street.

One was the date for the last match in the 1948 Lower Bucks County Trapshooting League, which will be shot over the Bristol traps on September 26th.

The second was the date for the Association's annual outing. This was also set for September 26th, and it will be held on the club grounds in conjunction with the shoot.

Announcement was made by the Game Committee that the pheasants being raised jointly by the Edgely and Bristol clubs, will be released this Sunday morning. An appeal was made for assistance in catching, crating and liberating the birds. All who can lend a hand are asked to be at the pens, located on the property of George Bintliff, Sr., Edgely avenue, Edgely, at nine o'clock Sunday morning.

Heading the Association's outing committee are Sidney Popkin and Nunzio Rubino, co-chairmen. Others on the committee include: John Conca, Charles Rempter, John Baker, Harry Bossler, Ollie Hobbs, Ken Brandan, Don Moyer, John Johnson, Joseph Stevens, George Walker, James Chichester, John Bossler and Franklin Everett.

Co-chairman of the Fish Committee Ken Brandan, reported that recent rains have resulted in poor fishing locally, but with clean, cool weather the fishing should improve greatly.

Ollie Hobbs, chairman of the tournament casting division, gave a resume of the first annual casting tournament, held at Memorial Park on August 1st. All of the seven casters from Bristol who participated in the event won prizes, according to the report.

Sidney Popkin reported that the first match in the Association's intra-club rifle shoot was fired over the club's course early last evening, with 18 men firing for score. Scores will be tabulated and the results published in the next few days.

The domestic science department has in years past, been located in the basement, and now the two large class rooms on the second floor, which have been assigned to this department, afford more than twice the previous space. "The department is being made as modern as possible," states Miss Dorothy Patton, domestic science teacher, who has been in charge of this work and who will remain as one of the two teachers there. With the floor space doubled, teaching staff doubled and equipment added to and improved, the girls will really "go to town" with their home-making. It is believed, Miss Aylene Kase, a graduate of Temple University, Philadelphia, is the other young woman who has been added to the department. She will instruct in sewing. Miss Patton, a graduate of Drexel Institute, Philadelphia, will teach cooking, laundering, general home care, etc.

The domestic science department, effective this term, will provide instruction not only in cooking sewing, laundering and general housework, but child care, grooming, interior decoration, consumer education and family relationship.

As for the equipment the girls will be just as excited over it as the teachers are, the latter predict. Marbleized black and white material will cover the kitchen floor, this being decided upon as a practical color plan, so that color scheme for the remainder of the kitchen area might occasionally be changed, yet blend in.

Plans call for two kitchens. Equipment will be placed to form a "U". In the one, known as the "electric" kitchen, will be located an electric ironer, electric washer, stationary tubs, electric clothes drier, electric refrigerator and stove, electric dish washing machine and sink with garbage disposal unit. In the "gas" kitchen will be found a gas stove, tubs and board for instruction in hand-washing of clothing, deep-freezer of eight cubic feet capacity, hand iron (electrically heated). With greatly enlarged space for the department, the girls will have plenty of room for tables and chairs for work space. There they can make copious notes. A half partition separates the kitchen and the dining room. In the latter will be located necessary dishes, silverware, linens, etc., for proper instruction in place settings and table service, both for home and commercial service.

An archway leads to the living-room where the girls may give vent to artistic talents for decorative purposes. They will be instructed in proper care of furniture, cleaning, arrangement—likewise in buying of furniture and accessories.

A bedroom is also located in the plan. The girls will learn how to make beds—from mitering of sheets to the last "fluffing" of a pillow. Care of bed linens and instruction in home nursing will be on the schedule of instruction. It is the hope of the instructors to later have nursery furniture in order that child care might be taught.

One large room is to be given over to those interested in learning to sew. There will be housed five electric sewing machines, and one of the treadle type. In this department will also be steam and electric irons. A platform for fittings, together with triple mirror, will be of great aid to the young seamstresses.

For use of the home economics department another room will be fitted with numerous shelves to provide ample storage space.

When the schools open on September 8th, the girls in grades eight and nine at Bristol high, will find the domestic science instruction listed as "required," while those in grades 10, 11 and 12, who follow the general course, will find domestic science as part of that course. Previously the domestic science course covered only grades eight to 11.

Claims Russians Prepared For War Since Last One

To achieve this the Soviet high command always tried first to convince the Russian soldier that the Soviet system is the best, that it is at all times threatened by the "capitalist world" and that no information whatsoever should penetrate the mind of the Soviet fighter except through "the official channels."

His mind must remain pliable and primitive, susceptible to all kinds of state-given impulses and propaganda.

In considering the best way of psychological warfare against the Russians, western democracies must take account of all these basic facts.

The choice of weapon in this psychological warfare is a difficult one. One must deal with a primitive, fanatic, and an utterly misinformed brain.

I know that a Soviet soldier can be scared stiff and that he is especially susceptible to panicky rumors. The Soviet soldier is adaptable and he can be without food and drink and warmth for a very long time. But he can be frightened out of his wits by new weapons he does not know.

He can be bribed, he may be even so frightened that he would turn against his masters, but he can never be persuaded by reason, through information or discussion, that his beliefs may be wrong or that his masters may be mistaken. I have often been asked what I consider the greatest weakness of the Soviet military power.

Without hesitation I answer: Soviet industry.

The question is raw materials, transport, production. Above all, the problem of quality of military equipment is the basic question of the Soviet military power, and indeed the question of the length and ferocity of a future world conflagration.

I had many opportunities in my capacity to watch the feverish Soviet efforts to improve war production both in quality and quantity. Let us not forget that ever since 1945 the Kremlin rulers have prepared for war and that the Soviet heavy industry figured as a war industry in the current five-year plan.

Of all the satellite states Czechoslovakia has the best developed industry and is therefore of great importance to the Soviets.

I happened to receive a document relating to Cominform discussions in Milan in the fall of 1947.

The Czech Communists there were accused of neglect "in preparation for a possible threat from the capitalist countries." One of the main dissatisfactions expressed in Milan by the Soviet comrades concerned Czech heavy industry.

Before the February coup the incorporation of the Czech industry into the Soviet pattern was done secretly and slowly. It can be revealed today that a lot of sabotaging was going on in order to slow up the whole process.

The Czech industry was forced to produce certain types of articles which were needed by the Soviets but for which there was hardly any demand on world markets.

Most of these are so-called "half-products" that is not yet fully finished products which could be easily converted in Russia into essential war material.

The main idea behind this drive was to keep up this sort of production till the moment when it would be possible to go on openly with war production. The economic stability of Czechoslovakia did not matter.

This moment came when the Communists took over last February.

What happened since then? All the Czech heavy industry is now under direct or indirect Soviet control. The production methods as well as production planning had to be molded into Soviet schemes and the whole industry is now entirely dependent, as far as raw materials are concerned, on Soviet deliveries.

In the case of a war between East and West, Czech industry is of some importance.

Its great disadvantage is its vulnerability from the air.

For this very reason the Soviets in their war plans, consider Czech industry an important factor in the preparations for war, that is, an accumulation of war material before the actual beginning of the conflict.

Therefore the "unfinished" products are transported further east into safety. Thus the loss of Czech industry in the first phase of the war would not be such a great disaster for the Russians.

All this explains why today the Skoda plants in Pilsen are producing parts for locomotive engines and trucks designed for the broad Russian rails.

The Skoda works are entirely under Russian orders. The Russians decide what raw materials are to be sent to Pilsen and what kind of machinery should be produced.

All in all it may be stated that the Russians are preparing for war and use the industry of satellite countries to the utmost for their purposes without any consideration for the economic life of the country.

(Tomorrow — In conclusion Gen. Hasal tells why the Czechoslovak army and airforce will not support Russia in war.)
